Summertime!

Welcome to the July edition...

At the time of writing this the sky is distinctly overcast but here's hoping by the time this reaches you we are firmly in Summertime!

After all, there's loads of great places to visit in the local area, which are so much more enjoyable if the sun's shining. If you want some inspiration on what's on in the area, then head to page 6 where you can find out about al fresco theatre and afternoon tea. Wishing you a great month ahead. Until next month,

Limiting family fallouts

Inheritance disputes can cost tens of thousands of pounds – even if you don't go to trial.

Hannah Tait, partner at Shakespeare Martineau in Solihull, explains what you should prioritise to ensure your affairs are in order...

Will

Your will is the cornerstone of your succession planning and ensures those you trust are in control when you pass away.

Your Will ensures your assets pass to your chosen beneficiaries and family members – guaranteeing this happens in the most practical and tax-efficient way to protect your loved ones and assets in the future.

It is important to keep this up to date, particularly if you get married, divorced or have children. Ideally, you should review this every few years.

Lasting powers of attorney (LPAs)

Apart from in the special case of children, no individual has the ability to make decisions on behalf of another without being legally appointed as their attorney under a LPA or as a court-appointed deputy.

Your attorneys are nominated individuals – such as a professional, family member or friend – you appoint to make decisions relating to your financial affairs and health and welfare on your behalf if you become unable to do so yourself due to mental incapacity.

A deputy is appointed by the Court of Protection. This can be a long process, so it is best to be prepared and put in place and crucially, register LPAs before the long-winded deputy route is your only option.

Consider how your property is held

If you own your home with someone else, the property can be held as joint tenants or tenants in common.

Where property is held as joint tenants, on the death of one owner, the property passes automatically to the other – regardless of the provisions of that person's Will. Many family homes are held as joint tenants as this is often seen as the "default" for couples. Although this may work well for many people, it is not always the best or most practical option.

Where property is held as tenants in common and one person dies, the share belonging to them passes in accordance with the terms of their Will. If they don't have a Will, it will pass via the intestacy rules to potentially unwanted beneficiaries. So, if you're an unmarried couple and neither of you has a will, if one person dies, it may be that their share in the house passes to their family and not their living partner. It is therefore crucial that property ownership is checked so it works holistically alongside your Will.

Playing hit after hit, from the dance floor classics I Wish and Superstition to the beautiful arrangements of My Cherie Amour and Overjoyed.

Rayner House Care is a private, not-for-profit residential care home in Solihull that also offers independent living apartments for rent, and an adult day centre.

We're one of the most affordable residential care homes in the area, yet without any compromise on the quality of care offered.

Residential Care Home

Our facility is perfect for those who aren't safe to live alone, who need support with mobility or personal care, or who may have mild medical conditions such as Parkinson's. Prices start from just £770 per week, making us one of the most affordable residential care homes in Solihull.

Independent Living Apartments

We have 21 flats, each with their own kitchen and bathroom, which are suitable for people who value their independence but would like some company, and the reassurance of knowing someone is there for help if needed 24/7. Rental prices start from just £154 per week.

Adult Day Centre

We have 15 places available each day for local people aged 60 and over who are looking for company and stimulation. Prices start from £37.50 for a half-day session and this also offers an opportunity for carers to get some respite.

a good read

Hamnet

by Maggie O'Farrell

This novel is the fictional retelling of the life of Anne Hathaway, who was married to William Shakespeare. The bard is never actually named in the book, which forces us to concentrate on Anne. Shakespeare left no documentation about his personal life: if he wrote diaries, they are lost. This leaves O'Farrell free to use her imagination within an historical context. Agnes - pronounced 'Anyis,' also known as Anne, is a farmer's daughter, who is married for love to a younger man with few obvious prospects. She is a gifted herbalist with psychic abilities, whose confidence and self-assuredness marks her out among women of her time. He is the son of a bully, with a love of the intricacies of language and a penchant for wordy puns. They certainly make an unusual couple. O'Farrell's novel comprises of a series of interwoven short stories, centring on each of the characters. Some of the earlier stories involve Anne's extended family of in-laws, which whom the couple live following her first pregnancy, and her arrangements for her husband to seek his fortunes in London, while she's pregnant with twins. In spite of their separation, the couple remain close until one of the twins, Hamnet, dies aged 11. The stories then centre on their shared grief and the strain this puts on their relationship, which culminates in him publishing his most famous tragedy, 'Hamlet'. O'Farrell writes beautifully and if you like attention to historical detail coupled with elegant storytelling then you'll love this book. If you prefer a spare, more fluid style of writing then you might find the going a little slow. O'Farrell also adopts the trend of writing women from history as possessing contemporary traits. I didn't find this an issue, but I can imagine purists wondering if Anne really would have been quite as liberated as she's written here. A wonderful read for history-lovers with a satisfying ending.

Through the Mirror Door

by Sarah Baker

Books like 'The Lion, the Witch & the Wardrobe', 'The Secret Garden' and 'The Ghosts of Motley Hall' are timeless children's novels which immerse the reader in another world. This was Sarah Baker's entry into this particular genre of children's literature, and it doesn't disappoint.

Angela is orphaned and living in foster care when she's invited on a family holiday with a distant aunt. Whisked away to crumbling manor house in France, she's bullied by her cousins, Kitty and Fliss. Angela feels isolated and lonely in the spooky house until she discovers Julien who becomes her only friend. But Julien is in danger, and she has to keep him a secret. His life is at stake, and Angela is the only person who can save him. As Angela races against time to save her friend, she also has to cope with the nefarious plans of her aunt and cousins. This delightful, spookily dark story is ultimately an uplifting tale about the power of friendship. And it has a nice twist at the end too.
