Chartered Architects Gary Winn RIBA and Dean Poulton RIBA are Progression Architects and have been based in Solihull since 1992. They are about to celebrate 25 years in practice.

The practice specialises in the design of domestic house extensions, one off houses and conversions, although they also have some corporate blue chip clients.

They offer an initial free appraisal of your project, within the solihull area, where their wealth of experience can be offered to examine your initial ideas and work with you to progress your ideas into a design.

At Progression we are also Chartered Town Planners and members of the Royal Town Planning Institute. We specialise in dealing with planning applications and negotiating with the Local Authorities. We also prepare, submit and attend Planning Appeals, where applications are refused, putting our case forward from an applicant's point of view.

As we are also Architects, we tend to think through our solutions creatively, at times from a perspective that is not immediately apparent. As Arboriculturists, we work together where tree issues meet planning issues, such as Tree Preservation Orders.

how do you like your pancakes?

February 13th is Shrove Tuesday and I will be tossing pancakes with the best of them.

Usually I am a traditionalist and favour lemon and sugar topping but this year in the interests of research I canvassed my friends for their favourite sweet and savoury pancake fillings, and tried them out. Here are my top seven.

Nutty chocolate spread and banana -

This tasty filling bulks the pancakes out, and makes the batter go further. Perfect if there are lots of people at your pancake supper.

Fresh mango and Greek yoghurt

with a splash of Cointreau - Very sophisticated and utterly delicious

Fruits of the forest with vanilla ice cream and a splash of Amaretto liqueur - This one was a revelation. The liqueur works brilliantly with the fruit, and the hot pancakes with cold ice cream is a sublime combination. Clearly I have classy friends!

Blueberries and maple syrup – This contribution from an American friend goes well with thick or thin pancakes. She tops hers with bacon, but you can leave that out. If you like.

Mushrooms, tomatoes and bacon

- for a British brunch-style pancake, or maybe a savoury supper.

Wilfed spinach and Ricotta cheese -

Sprinkle with a little fresh nutmeg and this makes a very tasty vegetarian supper.

Stewed rhubarb and crème fraîche - You can prepare your rhubarb as tart or sweet as you like. I liked mine tart. The creme fraiche works really well with it. I scraped some vanilla seeds into mine and beat them in before serving. This is officially my new favourite way to eat pancakes. Enjoy.

what crochet taught my son

Two years ago my mother decided to teach my son (aged eight at the time) how to crochet and recently it occurred to me just how much more it taught him.

Intergenerational communication skills

- My mother is clueless about Minecraft, Manga, and mobile phone technology, so conversing with Lucas could be stilted and awkward, but crocheting gives them a task in common and makes talking easier. By teaching him in small steps like a game, she made it seem achievable.

That you don't always need to be 'plugged in'

- A ball of wool and a crochet pin are the only tools required. He no longer asks for 'computer time' or complains that he's bored when we visit Grandma

That failure is ok - Of course he dropped stitches and tangled his wool but Grandma told him it was ok to stop, and start again, and encouraged him not to give up at the hurdles.

The sense of achievement - When he presented me with his first little coaster he was proud and thrilled. He loved that I put it on my desk and that my coffee cup sits on it while I write. Every time he comes in, even two years later he mentions it. For the Christmas just gone I received a lovely crocheted hat made by him, with help from his Grandma. When I wore it out on Christmas Day he nearly burst with pride.

I don't know if he will continue to crochet but even if stops he will retain the other life skills his Grandmother has imparted, and I may well have another natty hat by then too.

do you need a hearing test?

Here are five simple ways to tell if it's time to check your hearing:

You often ask people to repeat themselves

- It sounds as though people around you are mumbling all the time and you find it hard to hear people unless they're facing you directly. It's more common to experience hearing loss in the high frequencies so another sign is having trouble understanding women and children who tend to have higher-pitched voices.

Your family complains that the TV is too loud

- If you're turning up the volume to a point where those around you complain about how loud it is, it might be time to pay attention, especially since listening to excessively loud music can do further damage to your hearing.

You hear a ringing or buzzing noise in your ears

- Tinnitus occurs when you hear sounds like ringing or buzzing noise in your ears when no such sound is present. Sometimes it's temporary e.g. after attending a loud concert. But ringing which doesn't fade away, without any apparent cause is a common first sign of hearing loss.

You strain to hear in noisy places

- You struggle to focus on what people are saying in places with background noise, such as a restaurant or shopping centre. This can make you feel very tired.

You miss everyday sounds - If people complain you miss their calls or say they have to knock for ages before you answer the door consider it a warning sign, especially if combined with people complaining you have the TV or radio set too loud.

Whilst it can be tough to admit your hearing isn't as good as it used to be, it's best to take action early on. With the right support and technology, hearing loss doesn't need to keep you from enjoying all the fun things in life. Book an appointment with your GP or an audiologist today.

classic films for valentine's day?

You could go out for an expensive meal, or buy a bunch of overpriced red roses. . .or you could curl up with a glass of wine in front of a classic romantic film. There's something for everyone, whether coupled-up or happily single.

Annie Hall – This was probably the father of all romantic comedies. Alvy (Allen) is a cynical pessimist while Annie (Diane Keaton) is a ditsy, clumsy talented singer and photographer. If you've never seen it, don't expect a neat ending (this is Woody Allen) but it showcases love in all its messy absurdness, and is sharp, funny and never cheesy.

Ghost – This was 1990's second highest grossing movie (Home Alone came out top). Patrick Swayze plays Sam, murdered in the opening scenes. His spirit tries to warn his grieving lover (Demi Moore) that her life too is in danger. To do this he enlists the help of a reluctant psychic played by Whoopie Goldberg. The result is by turns tender, funny, and bittersweet. You will never hear Unchained Melody again without shedding a tear.

Pretty Woman – This is rather cheesy but has survived the test of time (mostly). It's a Cinderella story really as Vivian (played by Julie Roberts), a prostitute with a heart of gold, is hired by a businessman (Richard Gere) as an escort and turns his life upside down.

As Good as It Gets – No cheese here, just dry wit and snarky humour, delivered perfectly by Jack Nicholson playing Melvin Udall, a misanthropic author with OCD who falls for Carol (Helen Hunt), a waitress who can't stand him. It's a story of redemption.

Moonstruck – If you like your romances complex then this is the film for you. Italian-American widow Loretta (played by Cher) accepts a marriage proposal from her doltish boyfriend, Johnny, but then finds herself falling for his younger brother, Ronny (Nick Cage). She resists, but Ronny blames his brother for the accident in which he lost his hand and has no scruples about pursuing her in Johnny's absence. As Loretta falls further in love she learns that she's not the only one in her family with a secret romance. Cher is a surprisingly good actor and the chemistry between the leads is great.

The Wedding Singer – This engaging film is actually a parody of all things eighties. But the leads play their roles sincerely and that's what makes this work. Robbie (Adam Sandler sporting a fabulous mullet) is a singer, while Julia (Drew Barrymore) is a waitress. They are both in relationships with the wrong people but fortune intervenes to help them discover each other. This is pure romantic cheese, but it's top quality cheese so serve with only the best crackers.

chinese new year

February 16th - 2018 is the Chinese Year of the Dog.

Dog is the symbol of loyalty and honesty. People born in the Year of the Dog are said to be honest, friendly, faithful, loyal, smart, straightforward, and have a strong sense of responsibility.

There are twelve signs of the Chinese Zodiac: rat, ox, tiger, rabbit, dragon, snake, horse, goat, monkey, rooster, dog and boar. Here is the folk tale behind them.

Long ago in China the Emperor decided to invent a way to measure time. On his birthday he gathered all the animals by a great river and told them that there would be a swimming race. The first twelve animals to cross the fast-flowing river would be declared the winners and each would be named one of the twelve signs of the zodiac.

The animals lined up along the river bank. The rat and the cat were best friends and they were worried because they were poor swimmers. So they asked the ox if he would carry them across and the kind ox agreed. He told the cat and the rat to climb on to his back then carried them across the river. They were excited to see that he was leading the race. But before he reached the bank the rat pushed the cat into the water so he could jump on to the ox's head and leap to the bank claiming first place.

The Emperor did not see the rat's dirty trick so named him the first sign of the zodiac. The poor ox was tricked into second place.

The tiger wasn't a natural swimmer but fought the current all the way across the river to arrive third. The emperor was so impressed he named the tiger the third sign.

The rabbit knew he couldn't beat the river so hopped across on some stepping stones, then jumped on to a log which carried him downstream until he was close enough to jump ashore.

'Bravo!' shouted the emperor, 'I shall call the fourth sign after you.'

Then a dragon swooped down to the shore. 'Why didn't you win the race when you can fly?' asked the emperor.

'First I needed to make some rain because the people needed water for their crops. Then I saw a little rabbit sitting on a log in the river so I blew him to shore.'

'That is kind,' said the emperor. 'You are a worthy winner of the fifth sign.'

He heard the sound of horse hooves. 'Ah the sixth sign,' said the emperor, but then a snake, which had wrapped itself around one of the horse's legs wriggled out ahead and the horse jumped back. So the snake was named the sixth sign and the horse had to be satisfied with seventh.

Then a raft arrived at the bank and a goat, a monkey and rooster climbed ashore. They explained how the rooster had found the raft, the monkey and goat had helped clear the weeds and then the goat and monkey had pushed the raft to shore. The emperor was very pleased at their co-operation and named the goat the eighth, the monkey the ninth, and the rooster the tenth sign of the zodiac.

The dog arrived in eleventh place in spite of being one of the strongest swimmers. He said he had paused to take a bath because the river was so clean.

The last animal to arrive was the boar. He had stopped for a snack then fell asleep. 'You have still done well,' said the emperor, 'The final sign of the zodiac will be named after you.'

But do you remember the poor cat? By the time he had managed to climb ashore, soaked and shivering he had missed his chance of being a winner. This made him very angry and is the reason why cats have hated rats and try to kill them ever since!

UPVC & Bifold Doors to Suit All Applications

Mainstream Windows is a leading supplier of all types of replacement domestic UPVC & Aluminium Bifold doors. Whether you are looking for a new front entrance, back entrance or garage options, Mainstream's expert team can advise you on the best product to suit your property, lifestyle and budget.

For front entrance and back entrance, there are three main types of products used in homes today – wooden, UPVC and composite doors.

UPVC Doors

UPVC doors are available in a wide range of colours and finishes and their comparative lower cost to alternative materials has made them popular in recent years. They also have other benefits, such as a higher resistance to weathering and generally require less maintenance

Bifold doors

Bifold doors are built to stack neatly to one or both sides of an aperture when open. This allows people to move freely from inside to outside or from one room to another. These can be used as room dividers or to open onto a balcony or terrace.

Composite Doors

As their name suggests, they are made up from several different materials to produce a robust, secure and attractive-looking to protect your home. The combination of materials, such as PVC, wood, insulating foam and GRP (glass reinforced plastic) results in a product that is very strong and requires no painting or varnishing to keep it looking good over its long lifetime. An occasional wipe with a damp cloth is all that is needed to keep it clean and retain its smart appearance.

safer internet day

Safer Internet Day is now celebrated globally in February each year to promote the safe and positive use of digital technology.

The day helps to highlight positive uses of technology and to explore how we create a better and safer online community. This year's slogan is Create, Connect and Share Respect: A better internet starts with you.

Here are some steps we can all take to stay safe online:

Create complex passwords - Create strong, unique passwords for all your critical accounts. Corporate hacks are commonplace now. One database breach can reveal tens of thousands of user passwords. If you reuse your passwords, a hacker can take the leaked data from one attack and use it to login to your other accounts. The best advice is to use a password manager to help you create and store strong passwords for all of your accounts.

Boost your network security - Now that your logins are safer, make sure that your connections are secure. When you are at home or at work a password-protected router will encrypt your data. When you are out and about you might be tempted to use free, public Wi-Fi. But this is often unsecured, which means it's relatively easy for a hacker to access your device or information. If you access the internet a lot when you are away from home it's worth investing in a Virtual Private Network (VPN). A VPN is a piece of software that creates a secure connection over the internet, so you can safely connect from anywhere.

Use a firewall - This is an electronic barrier that blocks unauthorized access to your computers and devices. It is often included with comprehensive security software. A firewall ensures that all of the devices connected to your network are secured, including Internet of Things (IoT) devices like smart thermostats and webcams. This is important since many IoT devices aren't equipped with their own security measures, giving hackers a vulnerable point of entry to your entire network.

Watch what you click - Many of today's online threats are based on phishing or social engineering, when you are tricked into revealing personal or sensitive information for fraudulent purposes. Spam emails, phony "free" offers, online quizzes all use these tactics to entice you to click on dangerous links or give up your personal information.

Share selectively - Be cautious about what you share, particularly when it comes to your identity information. Information could be used to impersonate you, or guess your passwords and logins.

Think mobile! - Mobile devices face new risks: dangerous apps and fraudulent links sent by text message. Don't respond to messages from strangers, and only download apps from official app stores after reading reviews first. Make sure that your security software is enabled on your mobile, just like your computers and other devices.

Knowledge of Angels

by Jill Paton Walsh

Jill Paton Walsh is an extraordinarily versatile writer. Many will know her for her numerous works for children, and more recently for her work continuing the legacy of Dorothy L Sayers' Peter Wimsey novels. In addition to this, she has written a number of intriguing and thought provoking novels for adults, and 'Knowledge of Angels' is an excellent example of these two characteristics. The story is set on a Mediterranean island in the fifteenth century, described in almost cinematic detail in the opening pages, as Paton Walsh invites us to contemplate the nature of fiction and storytelling. To this closed community come two strangers – one from the outside, a castaway found by local fishermen, and one from within, a girl seemingly raised by wolves in the forests of the island. One is as eloquent as the other is savage, but their fates become irretrievably tied together as their stories progress.

At the heart of the book lie a number of questions of belief. Palinor, the castaway, professes to have no religion, which poses a challenge to the authority of the Inquisition on the island. Amara, the wolf child, seems unredeemably animal in her behaviour, but begins to grow under the care of the nuns of Sant Clara, raising the issue of nature and nurture. Both of their stories are also about love, and self-knowledge, and what is and is not possible.

Yet the book is written in such a way, that these weighty questions are explored at the same time as creating a page-turning thoroughly engrossing story, in which the reader is drawn in turn into the lives of Amara and Palinor. Disturbing, sensitive and deeply affecting, this is a book that will keep you thinking for a very long time.

Stormbreaker

by Anthony Horowitz

The first novel in Horowitz's phenomenally successful Alex Rider series, this is a must for fans of action, adventure and James Bond style one liners. Alex Rider is a seemingly ordinary 14 year old boy. However, when his uncle is killed in a car accident, his world begins to unravel. An orphan, Alex finds that without the protection of his guardian he is in the hands of his uncle's employers – and they are not a bank, but MI6!

Horowitz keeps the reader moving quickly from action sequence to action sequence, with a liberal amount of humour and contemporary references along the way. The structure is familiar to Bond fans, and once you have suspended your disbelief at the idea of a teenage spy, it all becomes gripping and plausible. In particular, the gadgets Alex uses and the villainous Herod Sayle will appeal to teenage readers – while the intriguingly sinister character of Yassen Gregorovitch is introduced here, ready to be developed further through the rest of the series.

Ideal for fans of ripping yarns and reluctant readers alike, you will find that one chapter is never enough, as Horowitz is the master of the cliff-hanger ending. A 12 year old of my acquaintance told me recently that this book is 'even better than the film' – if you know any 12 year olds, then you will know that I need not say any more than that!

Vanilla Panna Cotta with Raspberry Sauce

Preparation time: 1-2 hours

Cooking time: 10-20 minutes

Servings: 4

For the panna cotta

3 gelatine leaves

250ml/9fl oz milk

250ml/9fl oz double cream

1 vanilla pod, split lengthways, seeds scraped out

25g/1 oz sugar

For the sauce

175g/6oz sugar

175ml/6fl oz water

Splash raspberry, cherry or blackcurrant liqueur

350g/12oz raspberries

To serve

Sprigs of fresh mint and blueberries (optional)

Method

To make the panna cotta, soak the gelatine leaves in a little cold water until soft.

Place the milk, cream, vanilla pod, scraped seeds and sugar into a heavy-bottomed pan and bring to a simmer. Remove the vanilla pod and discard.

Squeeze the water out of the gelatine leaves, then add to the pan. Remove from the heat and stir until the gelatine has dissolved.

Divide the mixture between four pretty glass serving bowls and set aside to cool. Place into the fridge for at least an hour, until set.

To make the sauce place the sugar, water and the splash of liqueur into a pan and bring to the boil. Reduce the heat and simmer, stirring until all the sugar has dissolved.

Remove the pan from the heat and add the raspberries. Use a hand blender to blitz the sauce until smooth. Pass it through a sieve to remove the seeds. To serve, pour the sauce over the panna cotta and garnish with the blueberries and a sprig of mint.

Alternative serving method - pour the panna cotta mix into oiled moulds rather than serving dishes, and set in the fridge as before. Blitz half the raspberries into the sauce and strain through the sieve, then stir in the remaining raspberries. When the panna cotta are set, dip the moulds in hot water for a few seconds and turn the panna cotta out on to a plate, spoon over the sauce and decorate with blueberries and mint.
